

the love & adventure

travel | stories | photography

A full-time travelers, we love nothing more than exploring all of the exotic, unfamiliar corners of the Earth. However, there is something comforting about familiarity out on the road. You know when you walk into a space and feel those familiar warm and fuzzy vibes? One of the best parts about traveling is when we stay somewhere that feels like home. This place was definitely that for us. The Almond Tree is a luxurious homestay located just minutes away from the famous Umaid Bhawan Palace in a quiet neighborhood of Jodhpur. The rocky landscape surrounding the Almond Tree made us feel like we had teleported back home to the deserts of southwest America. We enjoyed evening walks in the neighborhood and stumbling upon a nearby stepwell.

Their rooftop terrace is the perfect space to relax - whether reading a book by day or enjoying the cool water jacuzzi in the evening (a brilliant choice question, the tastiest we've had in India!

Each room is unique and designed in a calming palette. They also sourced all of their products locally. The textiles and furniture were all designed and produced right in this area. As textile lovers, we were in heaven examining the modern woven fabrics. The rooms are more than generous in space and incredibly comfortable.

“ONE OF THE BEST PARTS ABOUT TRAVELING IS WHEN WE STAY SOMEWHERE THAT FEELS LIKE HOME.”

for this dry hot desert climate). As daylight fades, the terrace transforms into a magical setting for dinner with views of the star-filled sky and the majestic palace. The homestyle farm to table Indian meal we indulged in was, without like family and we had such a lovely stay at The Almond Tree. Thank you so much to Chetan, Megha, and their wonderful staff. We hope to be back one day! We couldn't recommend this property enough to anyone visiting Jodhpur.

The staff made us feel like family and we had such a lovely stay at The Almond Tree. Thank you so much to Chetan, Megha, and their wonderful staff. We hope to be back one day! We couldn't recommend this property enough to anyone visiting Jodhpur.